

BRIGADIER GENERAL TAMMY J. MAAS

Assistant Adjutant General – Army, Wyoming National Guard

Brigadier General Tammy J. Maas is the Assistant Adjutant General for the Wyoming Army National Guard, serving as its commander, with headquarters in Cheyenne, Wyoming. She is responsible for the readiness, training, leadership and strategic planning for the more than 1,500 soldiers in support of state and federal mission requirements. Units of the Wyoming Army National Guard include field artillery, engineering, maintenance, aviation, command and control, signal, medical, logistics, a training school and an Army band.

Major commands include the 115th Fires Brigade, 94th Troop Command, Camp Guernsey Joint Training Center, 213th Regiment-Regional Training Institute and the Wyoming Joint Force Headquarters.

General Maas began her military career in 1979 when she joined the Wisconsin Army National Guard. She attended Basic Training at Fort Jackson, South Carolina and Initial Entry Training as a computer operator at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. BG Maas moved to Wyoming in 1982 and joined the 197th Engineer Detachment at Camp Guernsey, Wyoming. After completing 10 years of service and reaching the rank of staff sergeant, she attended the state Officer Candidate School program in 1989 and was commissioned as a second lieutenant.

BG Maas has held a number of command positions in the state including 197th Engineer Detachment; 960th Maintenance Company; Detachment 2, Headquarters State Area Command Training Site; and 1st Battalion, 213th Regiment Regional Training Institute. She also served as garrison commander of Camp Guernsey Joint Training Center. Prior to becoming the Wyoming Army National Guard commander, General Maas served as the Chief of Staff and the Construction and Facilities Management Officer.
